Yes, I'm sure

Are You Sure About That? - An app and/or browser extension for those who could use a second chance to think before they post online

Have a friend that you wish didn't have commenting abilities on social media?

A parent who needs to think before replying to someone's Facebook thread?

A boss who could use a quick reminder before posting in Slack?

Are You Sure About That? can help!

It starts with an initial user. You download it onto your phone or laptop, change your preferred reminder settings, and then start sending Invitations for friends to join!

Are You Sure About That? has two main modes: Friendly Reminders or Techy Check-ins!

Not comfortable with the idea of AI checking your posts before you press send? Enter Friendly Reminders mode! You and your friends will get updates whenever someone within your circle tries to post. You then have 2 minutes to send your friend a message if you think their post is harmful, discriminatory, or a poor reflection of who they are. They can choose to respond to your message, automatically delete their post, or override your concerns. It's a great way to encourage accountability in your peers!

Have someone you want to keep tabs on, but they post at random hours of the night when you can't be there to encourage better behavior? Try Techy Check-ins! Set a list of words, phrases, or broader criteria, and our AI chatbots will help to fill in the gaps. If your friend really likes to comment mean things at 2am, you can set an AI watchbot to track their internet activity during certain hours of the day when you know you won't be able to respond. This way, you can still encourage good behavior!
